How will the construction industry grow in Tanzania in 2025?

Turn insights on financials, deals, products and pipelines into powerful agents of commercial advantage. GlobalData expects the construction industry in Tanzania to grow by 7.1% in real terms in 2025, supported by investments in the manufacturing, transport and energy infrastructure projects.

Which sectors have driven growth in Tanzania?

Growth in Tanzania has been driven primarily by transportation, infrastructure projects, communications, agriculture, manufacturing, electricity (especially renewable sources), wholesale and retail trade, travel and tourism, real estate, and business services. The private sector is also investing heavily in the mining industry after years of underinvestment.

Is Tanzania a good market for US exports?

The United Republic of Tanzania is an attractive market for U.S. exporters due to its relatively large population, estimated to be 62 million people. This makes Tanzania the 24th largest country by population, larger than South Africa and slightly smaller than Italy (source CIA World Fact Book).

What will Tanzania's economy look like in 2025?

Tanzania's economy in 2025 is poised on solid footing, building on the steady momentum of previous years. With consistent policy direction and resilience across sectors, the country presents a compelling picture for investors, analysts, and business stakeholders.
